Report On The 2007 Tourist Season: Records At The Port and Good Numbers At The Airport*

The Weekly Welcomes You To Saint Barth!

Welcome to the fifth season of The St. Barth Weekly, the only all-English newspaper on the island. Whether you come to the island frequently or are a first-time visitor, we hope you'll enjoy the news in The Weekly, the baby brother of the Journal de Saint Barth, our weekly French newspaper. The Weekly covers the island from all angles, allowing you to keep your finger on the pulse of local politics, cuisine, arts, and cultural events.

The Weekly is free and comes out every Friday from November through the end of July. Pick up a copy at your hotel, at the tourist office in Gustavia, or at numerous restaurants and boutiques around the island. Please feel free to offer your suggestions about things you'd like to see in The Weekly, and once you leave Saint Barth you can stay in touch with the latest on the island by down-loading The Weekly's electronic version at stbarthweekly.com. Enjoy your stay!

The numbers might seem in contradiction with the feeling of a recession on the island, and that 2007 was a bad year for tourism. Yet the port registered a record number of boats for the past ten years (mega yachts and sailboats) with more crew and passengers than in the past. In looking at the numbers, one has to look elsewhere for the problems that some businesses are experiencing. Overall there has been a general erosion in numbers since August 2007, and even if the beginning of the year was good, even very good, the numbers at the airport were lower than those in 2006. This trend confirms the idea of a recession, but getting back to the numbers:

With 180,413 passengers (arrivals and departures) at the airport, 2007 is average for the past 10 years, falling in fifth position after 1997, 1998, 1999, and 2000, with about 6,000 more passengers than 2006. Commercial aviation, with 177, 631 passengers transported, increased last year. All of the airlines did not have the same results. If Air Caraïbes, second in line with 53,249 passengers in 2007, or 29.51% of the market, saw an increase of 5.9% over 2006, Winair, which maintains first place with 61,398 passengers last year (or 34.03%), experienced a decrease of 9,000 passengers (-6%).

Saint Barth Commuter with 20.6% of the market, is in third place and increased its traffic by 5.3%. Air Antilles Express, which began a daily link to Guadeloupe in Juillet 2006, is in fourth place with 13,349 passengers. The leading private airline, Tradewind Aviation, with 3,014 passengers, is in sixth position overall, behind Windward Express, which hold the record increase of 16% over 2006.

Slowdown

Since September...

Was 2007 a good year? It had a good first quarter according to the numbers, a slight decrease in the second quarter, yet continual as of last August as compared to 2006. Over the past five months, the decrease in comparison to 2006 has been almost 1,000 passengers. This trend has been confirmed in the first months of 2008, with several possible explanations: firstly the low exchange rate of the dollar against the euro which decreases the buying power of visitors this year and last, and a financial instability in the US, travelers are carefully selecting their destinations, as the country heads into an election year as delegates are being selected to choose the presidential nominees for next November.

At The Port, A Record Year

The situation at the port is all together different, with both the pleasure port and the commercial port in the black: 2007 was a banner year in terms of numbers of yachts and sailboats—5,589—as well as passengers aboard—39,364—as confirmed by Bruno Gréaux, the director of the port: “this is the first time there have been so many boats come through,” According to him, Saint Barth opening of new marinas on neighboring island (especially Saint Martin), attracting new boats to the region. The numbers for ferries are a little lower than in 2006, the port director feels that the fact that the Rapid Explorer was out of service for many months (it started back up last week), it is normal that there were fewer passengers, a decrease from the record of 67,821 in 2005 to 61,817 in 2007, which was a fairly good year for the ferries, fourth highest since 1997. Identical for the decrease in cruise ship passengers—45,039—compared to 45,636 in 2006, could be due to the halt of the Windjammer cruises here since October 2007: “We counted. Over the year that makes 20 cruises less, or 1,600 people who would have come ashore if those visits had been maintained.” At the commercial port, the trend is up in terms of numbers of containers, reflecting a constant evolution since 1997, and the overall tonnage of imported merchandise has increased as well.

A Colorful Morning At The Lodge

Pink, green, yellow, turquoise, orange, purple: a riot of hot tropical colors in just the right tones for a contemporary look. Hot pink doors share a shoulder with a chartreuse wall, as matching green towels are coiled in a basket on the floor. Interestingly the basket is made of recycled tire parts, as are additional baskets in the bathrooms where crisp white towels contrast with the dark rubber. These are just a few of the many unusual design accents that catch your eye at The Lodge, a new luxury guesthouse above Grand Cul de Sac. On the morning of February 13, owners Marie-Aimée and Guy Perrier, and manager Patricia Grimaldi, invited the members of the Saint Barth Hotel Association to a lovely breakfast in order to introduce them to the guesthouse and its five finely appointed suites. Sitting around the one large table in the open-air dining room, the group was served fresh fruit, juice, coffee or tea—in oversized white cups—croissants and tartines. The idea of the large table is that meals at The Lodge are communal for the guests, as well as people from the outside who can reserve for the dinner prepared one night per week, for breakfast or Sunday brunch. “The breakfast service has to be just perfect,” says Grimaldi, who has over 15 years of hotel experience on the island and is helping The Lodge put its best foot forward. “I believe in personal service for the guests,” she adds. “I like to please them and try to meet all of their requests.” For her, this personalized service starts with meeting guests at the airport and carries through to meals. The dining area is on the same level with the pool, and the food service remains open from after breakfast until 3pm with snacks, sandwiches, salads, and drinks available. “The Sunday brunch has fruit, eggs, breads, pancakes, tarts, salads, raw fish...

everything is simple but very fresh,” she notes. “But people from the outside need to make reservations two days in advance.” There is also a fixed-menu dinner available once a week: “The cuisine will be traditional French, maybe with a Caribbean twist as we use local products,” Grimaldi explains. “We will advertise the menu in advance.”

With its combination of high-style design married with an elegant simplicity in the architecture and some of the most extraordinary views on the island, The Lodge is the perfect place to relax, take in the fabulous panoramas of the lagoon and the mountains, and chat with other guests over a meal. “We are striving for luxury, quality, and tranquility at The Lodge,” stresses Grimaldi. “But it is unmistakably Saint Barth!”

Three Questions For Karine Miot, President Of The Urban Planning Commission

Territorial council member, Karine Miot became the president of the urban planning commission in late January. She has replaced Jean-Pierre Magras, who resigned from the position. This post dovetails with her professional activity as a lawyer in that she is aware of the legal aspects of the new local code for urban planning that went into effect on January 1, 2008. She answered three questions posed by Saint-Barth Weekly, concerning her new role, and the rules for urban planning that are now applicable.

Saint-Barth Weekly: The urban planning code went into effect on January 1, 2008. Has this changed the role of the president of the urban planning commission?

Karine Miot: No, not really. That role has always consisted primarily of studying requests for building permits, certificates, or information about urban planning, before the dossiers are presented to the commission. But it is the commission which has the final decision making power. This commission is made up of seven people, including three from the opposition lists in the last election, and they are generally in agreement. My role also includes meeting with those requesting permits, in certain cases, either prior to their request to explain the rules, or when they make their request for a building permit and it goes into the urban planning system for the COM of Saint Barth, or perhaps if or when a permit has been refused. But what everyone must understand is that the president of the commission does not authorize the permits. For all dossiers submitted after January 2008, that job falls to the executive council, once they have been alerted as to the decision of the urban planning commission.

Saint-Barth Weekly: It's a little confusing. Since January 1 and the application of the new urban planning code, what are the rules in terms of building?

Karine Miot: It's clear: for now, the national rules for urban planning and especially the rule for limited constructability, are in effect while waiting for the application of an urban planning document which should take the form of a map, accompanied by the local regulations. The rule for limited constructability means that it is impossible to build outside of zones already built up, and cases are examined one by one, with the jurisprudence established by the administrative court in Basse-Terre. Outside of that law, when offering its opinion, the commission carefully studies the integration of the construction into the landscape.

Saint-Barth Weekly: If we understand correctly, it will be with the application of the new urban planning map that the criteria concerning the dossiers for urbanism will change. What is the timeframe for the project?

Karine Miot: Yes, effectively, it is when the new urban planning map goes into effect that the criteria will change. The map will precisely outline the zones where construction is possible and those zones where it is not. It will also have a defined use for each zone—commercial activity, residential, industrial—a precision that was not, in comparison, part of the Marnu (former urban map). The map will be accompanied by local rules, which are primarily architectural regulations. The territorial council authorized the creation of the new map on Tuesday, February 12. That gives us the right to delay decisions on certain dossiers that might be questionable in terms of future construction. We have 24 months to make decisions on those questionable dossiers, and we hope that the map will be approved before that time.

VIOLENCE ON THE ROAD: ONE OF THE PERPETRATORS BEHIND BARS

One of the perpetrators of an altercation that took place on Thursday, February 7 first at la Tourmente, the top of the hill near the airport, and then near the fish market in Gustavia, was placed in temporary detention after a hearing in Basse-Terre on Saturday, February 9. He was also to be judged at the same time for five other crimes he is suspected of having committed. The second person involved in this incident was freed after the hearing in Guadeloupe, yet he must appear before the court in the future. The two are suspected of being guilty of acts of violence committed on Thursday, February 7 against the driver of a car. According to the gendarmes, the driver was at the traffic circle at la Tourmente, behind a person on a scooter, who stopped to talk to a person on a second scooter. The fact that the scooters stopped in the road resulted in blocking traffic. The driver honked, and as he pulled up next to them, he lightly touched on of the scooters. The owner of the scooter, very upset, started screaming at the car's driver via an open window, and at the same time brandishing a knife. The driver then held up a hand-saw. When the first scooter driver put away his knife, the second scooter driver hit the automobilist with his helmet, and he was helped by third parties to get away. Yet as he left the scene, he angrily knocked over the other scooter. The owner decided to chase him into Gustavia and managed to block his path near the ferry terminal. With the help of his accomplice he slit the four tires on the car. This resulted in the arrest of one of the scooter drivers—the other having fled before the gendarmes arrived. The victim, who suffered wounds to his face, was taken to the hospital. He has two large hematomas on his face and suspected head injuries. The second scooter driver—who hit the automobilist with the helmet—appeared at the gendarmerie late that afternoon, presenting himself as a victim. He was held for questioning, and eventually transferred with his accomplice on Saturday morning to Basse-Terre in Guadeloupe.

Two Drug Dealers Arrested

Island gendarmes—who did not want to comment on the case—are said to have picked up two people in a drug bust. According to our sources, the first man, in his twenties, coming from Saint Martin, was stopped on Tuesday, February 5 at the arrival of the Edge ferry, in possession of drugs, although the nature (marijuana or cocaine) and quantity is unknown. A second person, also in his twenties and from St. Barth, was picked up and taken into custody at the Gendarmerie in Gustavia. It is thought that they took the same plane as the persons involved in another incident of violence on Thursday, February 7, so it is possible they were also taken before the judge in Basse-Terre, and it seems that they have not come back to the island.

Spirituality In Art

Kay Quattrocchi's Earth Elements Collection

What power does art have in our lives? How does it affect our subconscious? What is the creative role of man in our society?

A point becomes a line, then becomes a form, then an emotion—an emotion that can be contained or not. "I wanted to return to classic academic design, then I felt close to the origin of man when he was nearer to the earth, like a child making his first discoveries. From Neanderthal man to the Shaman.... And for me the position of the hands and feet are important, they can be close to the ground, they can grab on, or the contrary. They can be above the earth as if signifying respect, or a mute permission from the earth to lean against it," the artist says. Earth Elements is a series about man as he is born of the earth and spreads his wings. There is a pureness between man and the earth, where both come together on these large white canvases.

TWO NEW HORSES AT THE RANCH IN FLAMANDS

Siwa and Réglisse: those are the names of the two new horses that recently joined the ranch in Flamands, which now houses a dozen equines. Six year-old Siwa is a male—and Replisse is his three year-old son—both of the Criollo family, a breed of small Argentinean horses that are direct descendants of the horses imported into the New World by the Spanish colonials. Both horses came to Saint Barth from Saint Martin where they were born.

Puzzle Star

There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. It's fun. It's challenging. It's addictive! "Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9." That's all there is to it.
