Dimitri Ouvré, Double European Surfing Champion

Surf: Dimitri Ouvré, Double European Champion

It's very exciting: Dimitri Ouvré, who grew up surfing in Saint Barth, was crowned the "Under-16" European surfing champion on Saturday, December 6. A member of the AJOE Reefer Surf Club in Saint-Barth, Ouvré also won another European championship, this time a team championship, during the Euro-Junior surf event, which took place on November 30 – December 6 at the surf spot in Imourane, 14 kilometers North of Agadir in Morocco. With 12,226 points, the French team won the competition in a tough battle against Portugal. The young and talented team from Morocco, which participated in this competition for the first time, came in fourth, a good finish for them, just behind Spain, which took third place with a margin of just 91 points. Overjoyed by his wins, our champion should be back on the island during the Mardi Gras holiday.

Two Behind Bars After Big Drug Sweep

Two foreigners—one from Colombia and one Dominican—living in Saint Barth for the past few months, were arrested and placed in the detention center in Basse Terre (Guadeloupe) as the result of a large anti-drug operation that took place in Saint Barthélemy on Tuesday, December 2 and Wednesday, December 3. These two suspects were considered to be the kingpins of drug traffic on the island, transiting several kilos of cocaine over the past six months.

This anti-drug operation was led by the gendarmes under the orders of Jacques Louvier, the deputy public prosecutor, in collaboration with the territorial police and logistical help by the Collectivity. Their efforts led to twelve searches and the questioning of the supplier for the drug ring in Saint Martin. Doses of cocaine and small bags of cannabis, as well as money, were found during the searches, but this only represents a tiny portion of the several kilos of cocaine in question. A total of six people were brought in for questioning, including the two that were jailed. The on-going inquiry will look into the potential ramifications of this drug network.

Drug Sniffing Dog Dies of Congenital Disorder

He had just arrived on the island on Monday, December 1, and took up his post at the gendarmerie in Gustavia the next day. The two-and-a-half-year-old Braco de Malvau, a fox terrier trained to find drugs, died on Wednesday morning after participating in the anti-drug operation on the island. An autopsy revealed that the dog died of a congenital disorder. He should be replaced in the next few weeks by another drug sniffing dog.

SAILORS RECOVERED BY CARGO SHIP AFTER CATAMARAN HITS BY WHALE

Frédéric Tassigny hoped to arrive in Saint Barth on November 24 at the helm of the 42' catamaran, Courtship, he bought in early September. But on November 18, a whale collided with the boat, causing a great deal of damage to the portside hull and blocking the tiller, refraining the boat from maneuvering. Frédéric was sailing with a friend who came from Spain to help him sail the boat from Annapolis, Maryland, where it had been based, to Saint Barth. 250 miles from the coast of Bermuda, they were obliged to pronounce the words that break the heart of all sailors:

"Mayday! Mayday!" and trigger the Argos buoy at around 9am. Late in the date, a 650' Turkish cargo ship weighing 32,000 tons and moving at 13 knots picked up the two men. The American Coast Guard flying over the area asked the ship to make a detour and try and recover the men. After four attempts, the two men were finally able to climb aboard the cargo ship: their only baggage their respective passports, the marine chart that witnesses their journey, and for Frédéric, his MAC laptop, which he managed to save. The portside hull of the boat continued to fill with water and was abandoned. A disaster at sea! The rescue was spectacular, but difficult to accept: Frédéric admits he "cried like a baby when I saw my wounded boat disappear in the Northern Atlantic." It took them 11 days to reach Ceuta in Spain, where they disembarked after another incredible maneuver. Frédéric finally arrived in Saint Barth on December 2, where he joined his wife, Sophy, and the unexpected support of a circle of friends from the old days—the couple had lived on the island for seven years before leaving 11 years ago. A little comfort after the pain!

CELEBRATION OF SAINTE BARBE

The Fire Station Still Understaffed

The annual celebration of Sainte Barbe in Saint Barth (see below) allows those responsible for the fire service in Saint Jean to remind us of one thing: there are not enough firemen. 2008 was senting president of the COM Bruno Magras, who was in Paris at the time. "We are serious about giving you the means to operate at maximum efficiency. We have already started the process, even if for the time being

SAINTE BARBE, THE FRENCH FIREMEN'S PATRON SAINT

The French firemen's patron saint is Saint Barbara, also known as "Sainte Barbe," whose feast day is December 4, as celebrated by the firemen in Saint Barth last weekend. They started celebrating on Friday with a Scrabble tournament followed by a large-scale, fire-fighting simulation exercise at the station in Saint-Jean. The festivities continued on December 6, with a sports demonstration, followed in the evening by the Fireman's Ball. On Sunday, the fire trucks and firefighters paraded in the streets of Gustavia before a lunch with all of the fireman and their families.

not an exception. Fire chief Jean-Louis Danet once again made the point: "We lack men and it is very difficult to function properly, even if the Collectivity has given us essential material help."

it is only in terms of equipment. But we hope to continue and we are working toward a complete autonomy for the fire and rescue service."

This is a reproach the local officials have heard before and they hope to find a solution once the fire station is placed under the management of the Collectivity. That was at least the message passed on by Yves Gréaux, first vice president, repre-

In addition, the president has frequently expressed his desire to combine the firemen at the airport, already under the control of the COM, geographically with the fire station in Saint Jean, which is located no more than 200 meters from the runway at the airport.

David Henderson At Helm of Christopher Hotel

After a short hiatus away from the island, Scottish-born hotel manager David Henderson is back in the saddle as manager of the Christopher Hotel (www.hotelchristopher.com). The Pointe Milou property had been sold and remained empty for a year-and-a-half as the new owners decided what direction they wanted to take. "One idea was to turn the hotel into a five-star deluxe, full-service property," says Henderson. "But with the current worldwide economic crisis that might not be the way to go."

In the meantime, the decision was made to bring the hotel back to life this season as a lower cost, no-frills option. "With 41 rooms to fill, they decided to offer prices starting at 99 Euros in the low season, with a continental breakfast buffet included" explains Henderson, pointing out that the low rates are reflected in a more casual level of service and a pared-down staff: no room service, no turn-down service in the evening, no maid service on Sundays, and no dinner service, but the poolside restaurant is open six days a week for lunch. The hotel's plantation-style furniture is still in place, giving it a familiar look to those who know the hotel from the past. Also familiar is Geraldine Smits, who is back as assistant manager in charge of reservations.

The goal is to bring new clients to the hotel and the island: "This is a very unique opportunity for people who might not be able to come to the island and stay in a hotel at 300 or 400 Euros a night. The Christopher is appealing to first time travelers to the island who can get a taste of what it's like," Henderson notes. Open since November 10, the hotel reports 40% occupancy for its first month, and is looking at 60-70% for December and January. Word got out via blogs, websites, and items in such US papers as

USA Today and the Washington Post, as well as advertising on the island. "Everyone here knows someone who is coming and needs a hotel room," says Henderson. "It all snowballed from there."

Henderson's sister, Wendy Wang, is the chef, offering an innovative menu for lunch by the pool with salads including fresh ingredients from chicken, mango, and oranges to ginger, coriander, and fresh seared tuna, plus brochettes, grilled fish and meat followed by profiteroles, chocolate mousse, or crème brûlée. "There is a fixed price menu of 25 Euros for an appetizer, main dish and dessert,"

Henderson points out, noting that his nephew is on hand as restaurant manager, making it a family affair. The poolside bar is open seven days a week from 11am-6pm.

"I think the island is going to have to market itself differently over the next few years," says Henderson. "We can't rely just on the very small percentage of people at the top of the market to fill all the rooms year-round. It's better for the long range to have some lower-cost options." With Henderson (who has 15 years at Le Toiny under his belt) at the helm, the Christopher is taking the lead in well-run, budget-conscious hotels that offer the Saint Barth experience in a less expensive way. At least for now: a decision will be made in January as to the future of the property.

The weather forecast is in: as of today, the trade winds are here. As a result, the first boats in the fleet for the Transat Classique Lagassé—which set sail in Agadir on November 17—should arrive in Gustavia on December 16 or 17. “After eight days at sea with cold winds associated with rain, the boats are taking full advantage of the warmer trade winds,” explains François Sérurier, the operations director for the Transat Classique Lagassé. They had better enjoy them now: as of Friday the winds should be a little less strong and slow down the last three days of the race. Who will win the second leg? Le director of the race doesn’t want to hazard a guess: “These boats are not used to spending 20 days at sea and need daily maintenance. Wimco Celebrates 25th Anniversary

On Thursday, December 4, Wimco held a party at the Sereno to celebrate the publication of the most recent Vendôme Guide, which comes out every two years. The party also marked the 25th anniversary of this marketing and reservations company. Based in Newport, Wimco has been the exclusive US representative SiBarth since 1983: "Our job is to create consumer demand for a St Barth vacation, and then to translate that demand to reservations for villas or hotels, says Stiles Bennet, Wimco's vice-president of marketing and sales. This 25-year partnership between the two companies has brought a lot of tourists to the island of St Barth each year. Since the beginning, it has acted as the unofficial tourism department for the island, helping to launch new hotels, helping villa owners fill up their houses, helping create demand for local services...and helping to create jobs on St Barth as a result." This year, 30,000 copies (rather than the usual 20,000) of the magazine were printed, and its 80 local advertisers were invited to the party. This unusual magazine combines an exhaustive and practical guide to over 260 villas available for seasonal rentals by SiBarth as well as a look at the island's hotels, while the front of the magazine is devoted to discovering the island, with information on restaurants, activities and events that visitors can enjoy once on the island. The Vendôme Guide is also distributed in advance to all clients of Wimco who reserved their stay on the island, and sent to them at the moment they make a deposit. It is also sent to part of the agency's mailing list, including former clients who might want to return to the island. Each client also receives a copy upon arrival on the island. The 2008 edition should arrive this week, is based on a theme that is very important to this company that does more than 50% of its business on the island: what can be done to help Saint Barth become even more concerned about protecting its environment.

The American Market At The Forefront

For Stiles Bennet, vice-president for marketing and sales at Wimco, the American market is their primary market for Saint Barth and should remain so for the foreseeable future: even in spite of the exchange rate for the dollar or the economic crisis. "It's a little paradise just a few hours from New York and in the same time zone," Bennet. He points out this interesting statistic: In recent years, 90% of the money generated by seasonal rentals came from American clients, with the exception of the month of August, which is primarily French visitors. "We are investing more in developing a foreign clientele, especially European, through our agents in London and Paris. But we must face the reality: they have other "Saint Barth's" more accessible than a transatlantic flight," Bennet explained to us, at the Vendôme Guide part. So for him, even if the European market can help reinforce the summer season, we cannot neglect our efforts in the American market.

An Unusual Artisans Exhibit

Twenty-one students studying small and mid-size business management in Guadeloupe are visiting Saint Barth through Saturday, December 13. Since the beginning of the week, they have been attending morning classes taught by four of their professors, upstairs at the Capitainerie in Gustavia. In the afternoon, they turn to salesmen at a high-quality artisans exhibit held outside in the covered area of the building. The wonderful objects made by three artisans in Guadeloupe comprise paintings made of natural sand from the beaches, woven and bamboo baskets, and jewelry made from natural fibers such as banana, coconut, and bamboo. The students brought the items with them and have had them on sale all week. "This trip, which the students largely organized themselves, is a kind of culmination of the theoretic courses they have completed in business management, accounting, and sales," explains one of their professors. With an additional challenge: speaking English! Going to see their exhibit is helping them with their business and language skills. Don't hesitate to stop by!

Chanté "Nwel" !

Pronounced "Shauntay Nwell", this Creole phrase literally means "Singing Christmas". On Saturday December 6, the ASCCO association organised, on the Flamand municipal square, a traditional Christmas sing-along. We imag-

Renovated Luxury At Hotel Le Toiny

One of the most exclusive hotels in Saint Barthélemy—the five-star “Relais & Chateaux” Hôtel Le Toiny (www.letoiny.com) offers just 15 luxurious Villa Suites painted in perky pastel colors on the outside—with private pools, outstanding ocean views, and a perfect attention to detail. Open since 1992, Hôtel Le Toiny was renovated this year, adding to the elegance and charm of the property. “The Villa Suites just went through a complete refurbishment and now offer a vibrant French Colonial style that is much more colorful and warm,” says the hotel’s Executive Sales Manager, Claire Hillau. The fabulous four-poster mahogany beds—made in Martinique—still mahogany furniture is complemented with four different fabric color schemes—taupe and red, turquoise and green, or mauve and beige, plus the classic blue “toile de jouty,” which has been a popular color at Hôtel Le Toiny since it first opened.

“We just built a new gym with ocean view, plasma screen, bathroom, and fully equipped with the latest in high-tech exercise equipments,” adds Claire. The gym is open from 7am – 11pm for the convenience of the guests at the hotel. There is now a barber shop, which is part of an extension to the Serenity Spa Cottage. “It is a barber shop only,” Claire notes, pointing out that there are “hairdressers on call, for in-room service or service at the Serenity Cottage, upon our guests’ preference.”

Also new is a free laundry service for guests as of January 1, 2009, at which time they will also begin growing their own vegetables in a new 2000 square foot organic greenhouse.

The hotel’s restaurant, Restaurant Le Gaiac, also has some news for the season. The Fish Market is now every Tuesday (rather than Wednesday) and is available for both lunch and dinner.

“This year there is an even larger selection of fresh fish to be chosen by the clients and grilled before their eyes,” says Claire. Le Gaiac is also famous for its Sunday brunch, with a buffet that features a large choice of salads, tartars, fish, quiche, barbecue, desserts (don’t miss the chocolate mousse!), and of course the fabulous panoramic views of the sea.

Executive Chef Stéphane Mazière has created two new fixed-price menus for the season as well, and they are available every evening except Tuesday: Découverte des Antilles (Discover The Antilles, 100 euros excluding beverages) and Terre et Mer (Land and Sea, 130 euros excluding beverages). “The dining room has been refreshed with a new turquoise blue tone which reminds you of the sea beyond,” notes Claire.

From dining or enjoying Sunday brunch in the open, airy restaurant to relaxing by the pool, or checking in to one of the finely appointed Villa Suites, Hôtel Le Toiny defines the very kind of luxury that Saint Barth is known for!

Puzzle  www.sudokustar.fr

There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. It's fun. It's challenging. It's addictive! "Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9." That's all there is to it.
