St Barth Bucket 2009

Meteor Streaks to Win

What A Bucket!

By Ellen Lampert-Gréaux

The 2009 St Barth Bucket may go down in the annals of Bucket history as one of the best regattas ever! It started with a record size fleet: 35 incredible sailboats on the starting line, 33 of which were over 100' in length (the exceptions were Windcrest at 98' by Hodgson Yachts and Symmetry at 96' by Yachting Development—as well as Wild Horses, a 76' W-Class boat that spends every winter in Saint Barth). Not an easy feat, to assemble so much yacht power in one place at the same time, especially in a year when an economic crisis has reigned in the sails on a lot of other activities, nautical and otherwise. “As Buckets go, this one was epic,” says Hank Halsted, organizer of this annual event, the 14th edition of which took place March 27-

The Bucket fleet is divided into two classes: Les Grand Dames de la Mer, or cruising boats, with Meteor, a 170' Royal Huisman gaff-rigged schooner, Tom Perkins' high-tech, 289' Maltese Falcon (winner of the Perini Navi trophy presented at the Bucket), and Windcrest coming in first, second and third respectively, Adela, a 180' Pendennis Restoration took third place, with Windcrest second. Two newcomers, Baracuda, a 186' Perini Navi, and Varsovie, a 100' Swan, tied for the Escargot Cup, awarded to the “snails” in the race.

Camper Nicholson Yachts had generously donated 12 small Vanguard sailboats to the St Barth sailing school after last year's Bucket, and this year the kids from the school raced in a junior-Bucket with British sailor and double Olympic Gold Medalist Shirley Robertson on hand to give out the awards. In continued support of the children on the island, this year, the Bucket organizers donated 17,500 Euros, or 10% of the entry fees from the race to the junior high for new computers. “Our computers are antiquated, this will make us much more modern,” explained school director Christian Ledée. At the awards ceremony on the dock on Sunday, March 29, president Bruno Magras noted: “This is an important event for the island and I offer a big thanks to the owners of these fantastic boats. We hope to host the Bucket for many years to come.” If this year's Bucket was any indication, the 15th annual regatta in March 2010 ought to be quite a party!

With captain Dean Maggio at the helm, Meteor sailed beautifully, winning the first and third days' races, placing a disappointing 13th on the second day, yet putting in the best overall performance to take top hon-

STOP THE MASSACRE !

What a sad sight to see this sea turtle literally cut in half by the propeller of a boat, and found in the entry channel to the port by a diver last Friday. Disgusted by this kind of behavior, the Marine Park is going to take serious action; and since a picture is worth a thousand words, they decided to exhibit the animal in front of the Marine Park offices along the dock in Gustavia. "The idea is to make people aware of the dangers in going too fast in the channel, where there are numerous sea turtles. This is just about the last place in the port area where there are plants for them to eat. If all the boats respected the maximum speed of three knots, we wouldn't have this kind of spectacle," says the staff, which continually reminds people of the speed limit. But the truth of the matter is that at busy times in the port, such as the end of the year or during nautical events such as the St Barth Bucket, the speed limit is virtually ignored by the majority of the pilots who navigate in the port. What's worse is that the signage indicating the speed limit no longer exists.

A vital element for the neighborhood

Jean-Marie Danet is a happy man: the renovation of the pontoon in Corossol is complete and the reconstruction of the boat chute, which allows for fishing boats to be put into the water (or taken out) is almost finished as well. As a territorial council member who serves on various commissions (environment, education, culture, professional training, and security), and is also the spokesperson for his neighborhood, this project is important: "the chute is a vital element for Corossol. It not only allows for small boats to be stored easily out of the water in case of bad weather, but also protects the beach. Without it, rain-water that gathers along the road washes away the sand every time there are heavy rains. Needless to say, just three months before the start of the 2009 hurricane season, the entire neighborhood is relieved to see this work nearly completed." Originally built back when Rémy de Haenen was mayor, the chute was made longer in February 1999. While damaged by various storms and hurricanes since then, it had not yet been repaired when a part of the chute gave way completely under the force of the strong swells generated by hurricane Omar last October. These swells also damaged the pontoon in Corossol. Jean-Marie Danet has other plans for the neighborhood he hopes can become reality as well. One of these is to repave the road that runs through the village, especially near the top of the hill at the intersection with the road to Colombier, "a veritable ice skating rink when it rains," he says. The road also needs work at the bottom where numerous repairs have created a jigsaw puzzle of the paving. Danet would also like to see the electric wires put underground, but admits there is a problem: some of the houses have their septic systems under the road.... He would also like to find a solution for the parking problem along the waterfront in Corossol, and hopes that the beaches on the south side of the island will be given new sand, considering that "precious grains" were washed away by Omar, and while the project was budgeted, it has not yet begun.

CONGRATULATIONS !

Emily & David of New York, USA, celebrated their personal wedding ceremony at La Villa Fregate in St Barth on March 19. The intimate sunset ceremony was followed by cocktails and dinner at Hotel Le Sereno where the couple and their guests enjoyed "La Piece Montee des Maries" traditional French wedding cake. The event was organized by Melanie Smith.

Grouped Mail Boxes For Better Mail Delivery

Nicole Carel, director of the French post office for the overseas departments and territories, came to Saint Barth last week following the inauguration of a new mail-sorting center in Saint Martin. While here, she presented Georgette Choisy with a bronze medal of honor from the French Postal and Communications service, and took the opportunity to meet with vice president Yves Gréaux to discuss the ongoing problem of mail delivery encountered on the island. In spite of the efforts made by the post office, almost 10% of all mail goes undelivered, as compared to 1% in metropolitan France. "Monsieur Gréaux has indicated that new street signs have been put in place in Gustavia, and the next step is to put numbers on the houses and buildings," Nicole Carel told us on Saturday. She hopes this will happen before the end of the year: "We are at the disposition of the Collectivity should it want us to inform people of their new complete address." To do this, Carel plans to send a letter to everyone who has a mailbox in Gustavia, asking that they in turn communicate their new addresses. As for various neighborhoods, Nicole Gréaux suggested the idea of grouping mailboxes together in certain areas on the island. "This does not mean we would eliminate direct mail delivery, but try to facilitate it where such delivery is very complicated," adds Nicole Carrel. She promised that these groups of mailboxes will not be too far from the homes, and will have a parking place where it is easy and safe to park to collect the mail, as well as deliver it. This idea might be first tested in Public near the cistern and in Petit Cul de Sac.

Georgette Choisy with a bronze medal of honor from the French Postal and Communications service at the center.

"Bonheur obligé"

Steven Guermeur plays with images of our society, using them to show us the excesses, the deceptions, and false truths. He disturbs deeply based beliefs and tries, via each of his works, to instill doubt. "Bonheur obligé" presents a series of images portraying an ideal happiness, but an ideal perturbed by something: the synchronized swimmers—a symbol of photo perfectness —have strange eyes and thus become grotesque, the same smiles repeated over and over again turn fake, perfectly posed women admiring a bouquet of flowers —black flowers.
