TOURISM TANKS IN 2009

While activity at the airport plunged by 11.4% with 18,500 fewer passengers in 2009 than in 2008, the port did better last year, reporting an increase of 2.71% linked to cruise ship passengers (+12.37%). And in spite of the fact that there were a total of 283,000 passengers at the airport (arrivals and departures combined), 2009 remains one of the worst years for tourism in Saint Barth since 1996, as was true globally. The number of commercial flights was also down here by 11.28% dipping from 34,160 in 2008 to 30,308 in 2009.

Low Numbers In High Season

In this bleak scenario, the results varied depending on the season. Other than the month of April (-5.47%), the six first months of the year saw an important drop in tourists, higher than the annual average decrease of 11.4%. Things were bleakest in February with a record drop of 23.92%, while between January and June the airport experienced a loss of 17,770 passengers out of the total 18,500 lost in 2009 compared to 2008...

On the other hand, the low season held the winning hand, with an increase of 3.14% in July, 4.14% in October, and 2.38% in November for a total gain of approximately 1,000 passengers compared to the same period in 2008. Yet this increase did not continue: In December 2009 there was a 9.7% drop in the number of passengers at the airport (13,381 people) compared to December 2008 (14,818 people), which already represented an 11% drop in relation to 2007. In January 2010, the decrease accelerated: the first month of the year saw a reduction of 19.7% compared to January 2009, which had experienced a dip of 18.7% from 2008. This does not bode well for the high season in 2010, but are things worse here than elsewhere? Hard to say, as even the veteran tourism professionals agree that it's hard to predict more than a month ahead even in the best of times.

Air Traffic Decreases Worldwide

Without trying to minimize the importance of the decrease in passengers at the airport in 2009, it is interesting to make a comparison to the global situation last year. There was a significant drop "without precedent since the Second World War," according to Mr. Bisignani, director of the International Air Transport Association (IATA). Regional air traffic did not fare any better, recording a similar decrease to the one in Saint Barth, according to Eugène Holiday, president of Princess Juliana Airport in Sint Maarten, who estimates an 8 to 12% drop in passengers during 2009.

Fabrice Danet took over as director of the airport when Antoine Laplace retired.

A DISCOVERY WEEK ON BIODYNAMIC WINES

Jean Baptiste Barre
Absolutely wine
St Barthelemy

A project by Absolutely wine and W.I.S.S.E. sponsored by 'St-Barth Goût & Saveurs Association' and 'Les restaurateurs de St Barth Association' (Didier Bensa), in exclusive cooperation with Jean-Baptiste Barre.

From February 9 to February 13, we welcome 4 wine growers with character, whose philosophy is to respect the vine using simple growing methods, respecting both the soil and the plant; like our ancestors who in their time could not only imagine the present day ultra-productivistic deviance of modern agriculture.

The week will be dedicated to meetings, discoveries...and wine tastings. The four wine growers will be present for each dinner organized around their wines to make you share their passion, their philosophy, their history and to allow you to discover, or know better, biodynamic wines.

Jean-Baptiste Barre, from Absolutely Wine Cellars in Grand Fond, has created special menus with each Chef in charge of every dinner, in order to guarantee subtle, original, unique "accords" between the wines and the prepared meals.

NUMBERS UP AT PORT OF GUSTAVIA

passengers (31,834 compared to 34,564 in 2008) and a 5.7% drop in the number of boats (4,698 in 2009 against 4,986 in 2008), since the month of November 2009 there has been a constant upsurge in the number of yachts: +28.43% in November with 393 compared to 306 in 2008; and +4.63% in December with 611 against 584 the year before. January 2010 has followed suit, with 671 boats in the port and only 650 in January 2009 (+3.23%).

As far as ferries are concerned, compared to the air traffic between Juliana and Saint Barth, which decreased by 10.17%, the number of ferry passengers between the two islands saw a slight increase of 1.97%, from 42,477 in 2008 to 47,732 in 2009, in spite of a reduction in the number of actual ferry arrivals, which dropped from 2,303 in 2008 to 2,244 in 2009. This rise in passengers proves that the boats have scooped up part of the air traffic to St Barth. One reason might well be the price of airplane tickets from Juliana to Gustav III airport in Saint Barth, or the lack of airline seats on certain critical days during the high season.

Finally, the number of cruise ships has gone up by +12.37% with 60,264 passengers in port during 2009 compared to 59,100 in 2008, even in spite of 10 cancellations between December 28 and 31 due to bad weather.

Ernest Brin, director of the Port of Gustavia

In contrast to the airport, the Port of Gustavia has reported a 2.71% boost in activity compared to 2008. This is primarily due to a significant increase in the number of cruise ship passengers (+12.37%), but also a growth in the number of motor yachts and large sailboats. Although 2009 finished with a 7.9% decrease in the number of

Inauguration Of Hospital Extension

Open since December 5, 2009, the recent extension of DeBruyn Hospital in Gustavia was officially inaugurated on Thursday, January 5. With a total surface of 1000 square meters (10,000 sq ft.) on two levels, the new building houses 12 rooms for patients, six of which are private. The ground floor consists of a pharmacy, technical services, and archives. During the inauguration, hospital director Pierre Nuty indicated that the second phase of construction should begin "as early as next month." Phase two includes the renovation of the original building to comprise two consulting rooms for doctors, a laundry, a multi-purpose room for physical therapy and preparation for childbirth, locker rooms for the staff, a chapel, a meeting room, administrative offices, and space for a scanner in the future.

President Bruno Magras noted that on his part, he was happy to attend the inauguration of an institution that is "useful, indispensable for the population," and for which the support of the Collectivity is not only "natural, but also a moral obligation."

Biodynamic Wine Week

Jean-Baptiste Barre, founder and owner of Absolutely Wine in Grand Fond, came up with the idea of a week's activities designed to introduce the concept of biodynamic viticulture in Saint Barth. Taking place from February 9-14, and organized in conjunction with the associations Goûts et Saveurs and W.I.S.S.E, this oenological event will host four wine growers from France who have adopted biodynamic methods to produce organic vintages. Founded in 1924, this agricultural production system stems from the ideas and philosophy of anthroposophist Rudolf Steiner, and is a holistic approach to growing grapes. Biodynamic growers soil by over extensive exploitation. "Biodynamic vineyards are also characterized by their proximity to prairies, ruches, and hedges... an association of cultures that helps protect the soil from erosion by favoring the infiltration of water, and by decomposition, increasing the fertility and quality of the earth that surrounds the vines," explains Jean-Baptiste Barre. In addition to the quality of their wines, he also admires the perseverance of these viticulturists: "If something goes wrong, an entire harvest can be lost. You really have to believe in this," adds the sommelier who decided to organize this event to help promote these wines that he thinks are very interesting (see inset): "Here, a lot of different kinds of wine are consumed... Bordeaux, Burgundy, Pinot Noir... My challenge as a sommelier is to introduce these vineyards that are doing something exceptional. This is the case for the four wine growers who will be featured during this event. In addition, since many people are buying and consuming an increasing number of organic products, it seems appropriate to introduce Saint Barth to the concept of biodynamic wine, which has become popular elsewhere but is still pretty much unknown here."

The schedule for the biodynamic wine week includes a session open to the public, during which the wine growers will explain the basics of biodynamic viticulture, and talk about the specific wines they will offer during the tastings that follow the conference. On Wednesday, February 10 and Thursday, February 11 at 6:00pm, Absolutely Wine will host an open house during which wine lovers can taste biodynamic bottles and meet the wine growers, who, according to Jean-Baptiste Barre "will be happy to share their passion for their wine with as large an audience as possible." In addition, on five evenings from Tuesday through Saturday, a dinner with wine tastings will be organized in a different restaurant on the island.

Guillaume Keller

Each menu will be crafted in consultation with the chefs in order to perfectly pair the cuisine with these subtle, surprising, and unusual wines. Each evening is the perfect occasion to discover three to six different wines made by the four viticulturists. Wine tastings are also on the program at 5:00pm on Friday, February 12 at Do Brazil on Shell Beach.

"A"... Beautiful Boat!

The Port of Gustavia attracts some of the most fabulous yachts in the world, yet when "A" arrived last week it was a real eye-catcher. Owned by Russian banker Andreï Melnichenko, this 390-ft mega-yacht has an elongated, sharp bow. Designed by Philippe Starck with naval architect Martin Francis, and built at Blohm and Voss German shipbuilders, "A" (for Aleksandra, the owner's wife) looks like it stepped out of a James Bond film. In a recent article, Starck noted: "I was inspired by waves and fish when designing A." Martin Francis explained that for him the length of this boat was also a guarantee it would consume less fuel: "The hull of a yacht represents 15% of its total cost. The longer and narrower it is, the faster it can go, the less fuel it consumes, and the boat is more elegant."

Dimitri Ouvré Places 7th in World Junior Surfing Championships

Young surfer Dimitri Ouvré took seventh place in the World Junior Surfing Championships that took place January 20-28 on the famous surf beach, Piha, just west of Auckland, New Zealand. He was also the top Frenchman in the competition. David Blanchard of St Barth's Reefer Surf Club and Ouvré's former coach, comments:

"After a bad start which meant he was on standby for the next competition, Dimitri literally flew through the next qualification rounds leading to the semi-finals. But at that point, Dimitri didn't do very well as the weather conditions had changed and he was facing adversaries who were more comfortable on left-breaking and right-breaking waves, which, in spite of considerable progress, remain Dimitri's weak point." Eventually beaten by the young surfer who would become the 2010 champion, our young Frenchman, who was raised in Saint Barth, finished seventh in these individual championships.

Jane Thorngren Sings Love Songs For Valentine's Days

Jane Thorngren, who has appeared several times at the St Barth Music Festival and last year with the Chorale de Bons Chœurs, will once sing on the island. On February 13, just in time for Valentine's Day, this lovely soprano, who has performed extensively in New York, including at the Metropolitan Opera house, will present a concert at the Anglican Church in Gustavia. She will sing some of the world's best love songs, pulled from a wide repertoire, from opera to Broadway musicals, accompanied by Charles Darden on piano. Local tenor Laurent Cléquin will join Thorngren for two duets: the balcony scene from "West Side Story" and a number from "The King and I."

■ Puzzle  www.sudokustar.fr

There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. It's fun. It's challenging. It's addictive! "Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9." That's all there is to it.
